Join the Green Seattle Partnership and EarthCorps April 21 and 22 in the West Duwamish Greenbelt as part of an incredible 20-year effort to protect and restore our urban forest. Today, more than 70% of Seattle's forests are dying of old age or are overwhelmed by English Ivy and other invasive plants. If we don't remove ivy or plant new trees, we will lose most of these forests within the next 20 years! Please join our efforts to keep our neighborhood forests sustainable so future generations can enjoy the many benefits they offer our city. To sign up for the West Duwamish Earth Day events visit www.earthcorps.org. To volunteer as a Forest Steward in your favorite park, or learn other ways to participate in Green Seattle, call Joanna Nelson, Cascade Land Conservancy, Forest Steward Coordinator at (206-292-5907 x 117). Thank you!
